FINANCE AND COMMERCE

New York, July 20.—There was a glimmer of speculative interest in copper today. That was all that redeemed the day's market from being the dullest of the year. An anomaly in the dealing was that in the usual hour of the noon hour the proceedings gave place to a sport of activity which provided the heaviest business of the session. The demonstration in the copper group was not explained definitely but the proceedings gave rise to rumors of progress in the efforts to bring a working agreement between the leading producers to curtail the output. The buying of Amalgamated for foreign account was regarded as imposing and this supplied the point for an uplift of the whole group. Copper shares were a strong feature in London and Paris, as well, thus indicating considerable scope for the movement, whether it is purely speculative or of a more substantial nature.

The desire of important financial interests to affect a working agreement between the great copper producers and restrict production has been avowed as more than one occasion and is supposed to have awaited the supreme court decision on the anti-trust law for active steps towards consummation.

BUILT 380-MILE ROAD IN HOUR

Ten Thousand Iowa Farmers Turn Out With Teams for Great Job.

The greatest piece of road building the world ever witnessed was pulled off in Iowa last week when, in the short space of one single hour, a line of road 380 miles in length and stretching entirely across the state of Iowa was put in the most perfect condition of any road west of the Mississippi river. Weeks and months were spent in preparation for the work, but not a pick nor shovel was used until the designated second was ticked off. Then, as if by magic, 10,000 workmen swarmed out onto the roadway and when they ceased work sixty minutes later, Iowa had one of the finest long distance roads in the entire west.

And not the least interesting thing in connection with the tremendous piece of work is the fact that not a man of the entire 10,000 engaged on the work received one cent of wages. Good will and patriotism alone is responsible for the splendid showing. Last winter the Iowa roads became so fearfully bad that traffic was practically killed and farmers were compelled simply to remain in their homes. Finally the matter became a political question and both parties got behind the movement. Governor Carroll called a "good roads" meeting at Des Moines early last March, and out of this meeting was evolved the plan of a "river-to-river" road, stretching from Council Bluffs on the Missouri river to Davenport on the Mississippi, a distance of 380 miles straight across the state from east to west.

"Make the river-to-river road as near perfect as is possible to make just was the aim of the sense of the good roads convention.

Instead of appointing new committees to handle the work, the regular republican and democratic committees in each county through which the road would pass were appealed to. The chairman of the committee of each party were asked to get in the game and work for the road. Everybody agreed to do so and soon a rivalry was created between republicans and democrats, each to see which party would have the most workmen "on the job" when the time for work arrived.

Last Saturday was selected as the day and from 9 o'clock to 10 o'clock the hour of work.

Every farmer along the way was personally seen by the committees and practically every man agreed to give the one hour that was asked for. Farmers were asked to bring their plows, scrapers and road drags and an organization equal to those employed in professional railroad building was worked out.

In the weeks preceding the work all bridges and culverts along the road were repaired and put in first-class order, that no delay might come to the road builders when once the latter started working.

The result of the organization was shown last Saturday. Shortly before 9 o'clock in the morning farmers began getting out in the field, hundreds and thousands of plows, picks, shovels, scrapers, road drags, grading machines and other implements were brought along. Every farmer brought his team with him. Superintendents and overseers had been appointed in readiness when, promptly at 9 o'clock the order was issued to "fall to."

And ten thousand determined men "fell to." For an hour they continued, working with might and main. At 10 o'clock the job was finished and the farmers went back to their fields, leaving Iowa the possessor of the finest piece of long distance roadway in the west.—Council Bluffs Letter.

ANOTHER REPRIEVE FOR HODGES' SLAYER

Francisco Marquez Will Be Granted Thirty Days Extension of Life Tenure at Request of State Department.

Respecting a request from the state department which is made in compliance with a request by the government of Mexico Governor Shoup will grant to Francisco Marquez, under sentence of death in the territorial penitentiary and once granted a stay of execution of sixty days on a similar request, a further reprieve of thirty days.

Francisco Marquez on June 17, 1909, shot and killed Peter Hodges, a highly respected and popular pioneer resident of Yuma county, and wounded a companion of Hodges who brought the news to Yuma from Hodges' mining camp where the incident occurred. Marquez escaped and was the object of a man hunt for several days, in which a large part of Yuma county participated. He was captured, tried and convicted and sentenced to be hanged December 17, 1909, exactly six months after the crime was committed.

The case was appealed and the decision of the higher court not being rendered until after the date set for the execution, it acted as a stay and when the decision of the lower court was affirmed Marquez was rescheduled to be hanged May 27 of this year. Up to this time there had been no unusual efforts made by the friends of the condemned man, and it was not expected that his execution would be interfered with. But in May the Marquez case was taken up by the Mexican consul and referred to his government. The Mexican government asked the state department for their two months reprieve to give it time to make a thorough investigation. The time was given at the request of the state department, and now another month has been asked for and of course will be granted.

WHY FULLER WAS APPOINTED

Political Expediency Influenced Cleveland to Appoint Him Instead of Phelps.

When in the "early" part of the year 1888 Chief Justice Morrison R. Waite of the supreme court of the United States died, with 35 years of responsibility of his late Chief Justice, Fuller had on Monday, it became the duty of President Cleveland to select his successor. It was inevitable that a democrat should be chosen. Mr. Cleveland's immediate determination was to name Edward J. Phelps of Vermont, then holding the office of United States minister to Great Britain. Mr. Cleveland had known Mr. Phelps intimately and had a very high opinion of him as lawyer and jurist.

Mr. Phelps had made an eminently successful minister to England from a British conservative point of view. No previous representative of the United States at the court of St. James had acquired greater social prestige by his addresses and his social
